1.0 PROGRAMME OVERALL OBJECTIVE

The purpose of the national population programme is to implement the national population policy adopted by Government in January 1992. The principal objective of the population policy is to reinforce national development through harmonizing population trends with development of other national resources, in order to improve the quality of life of Tanzanians. This will be done through making population issues the basis of national development planning. The long term objectives of the national population programme are as follows:-

i) put in place the process of integrating population variables in the preparation and implementation of socio-economic development plans, by the year 2000;

ii) increase life expectancy of Tanzanians to over 60 years by the year 2010;

iii) reduce Tanzania’s natural rate of population growth to 2 percent per year by 2010; and

iv) put in place policies to influence population distribution in Tanzania towards sustainable utilization of the nation's resources for rapid socio-economic development, by the year 2000.

The detailed objectives and targets of the national population programme are outlined in the sectoral programmes.
2.0 INSTITUTIONAL BUILDING

2.1 INTRODUCTION

The main objective of the programme in this area is to develop an institutional structure with the capacity to make population a key element in socio-economic development planning in Tanzania through integration of population variables into development plans. Integration here means including in development plans "measures to achieve development objectives through programmes and actions that will influence demographic variables within a given period". The envisaged institutional structure will also have the capacity to co-ordinate and evaluate the national population policy programme of implementation.

2.1.1 Institutional Framework (CAPS)

At macro-level, the Government will take immediate measures to create and consolidate the following population policy implementation organs:- Tanzania Council for Population and Development; National Population Committee and Population and Development Planning and Policy Department; the latter within the Planning Commission. At sectoral and district levels, integration of population in development planning will be strengthened by creation of population desks in sectoral ministries and population planning and policy sections (units) in the district development planning offices.
a) Tanzania Council for Population and Development

The Tanzania Council for Population and Development (TCPD) will decide on all policy matters pertaining to population and development, including that of giving overall guidance with regard to the implementation of the national population policy.

The council will be constituted by ministers of appropriate ministries. The details of the ministries to be represented in the council will be determined during the establishment of the council. Minister of State and Vice Chairman of the Planning Commission will be the chairperson of the council. The council will meet at least once every year.

Under the Tanzania Council for Population and Development a steering committee constituted by principal secretaries of appropriate ministries, heads of appropriate public institutions, and heads of appropriate non-government organizations (NGOs) will be established to oversee the implementation of the population policy. The steering committee will have the following functions:

i) give overall co-ordination, monitoring and evaluation with regard to the implementation of the national population policy;

ii) advise the council on the desired direction and strategy in the implementation of the policy;
iii) approve long-term population and development programmes; and

iv) approve bi-annual policy implementation reports. The steering committee will also meet at least once every year and the Principal Secretary and Secretary to the Planning Commission will be the chairperson of the steering committee.

b) National Population Committee

The National Population Committee (NPC) is a multi-sectoral and inter-disciplinary technical committee which has been in existence since 1983 when it was established to help the planning ministry to prepare the country to participate in the 2nd African Population Conference in Arusha, and the World Population Conference in Mexico City both of which were held in 1984. Thereafter, the committee has advised the planning ministry on all issues pertaining to population and development, and it has been instrumental in the formulation of the national population policy and the national programme of implementation. This committee will be incorporated in the institutional structure for the implementation of the national population policy and strengthened by giving it a statutory status.

The National Population Committee (NPC) will have the following functions:-

i) to give technical advice to the planning Commission as needed by the organ in its population policy formulation and implementation functions; and
ii) to advise the Planning Commission on all issues pertaining to population and development. Among other things, the committee will give advice in the following areas:-

- compilation of all research work on population and development done in Tanzania, analysis of this research as to its usefulness, and its dissemination to planning offices in various sectors and districts;

- initiate a system of determining, preparing and undertaking research for development planning purposes;

- establishment of a population and development data bank to facilitate the integration of population in development plans;

- preparation of inter-sectoral population and development planning models;

- preparation of training programmes including workshops, on the integration of population in development plans; and

- co-ordination of the implementation of population and development programmes.

c) Population Planning and Policy Department

As part of the implementation of the national population policy, the current Population Planning Unit of the Human Resources Planning Department in the Planning Commission will be up-graded into a department within the Planning Commission. The functions of the Department will be as follows:

i) it will be the secretariat of TCPD, the Steering Committee and NPC, providing professional and administrative services in connection with preparation of papers and meetings of these organs. Its professional staff will be responsible for advance preparation which will enable the council and the committee to carry out their responsibilities as outlined above;

ii) prepare plan guidelines for population and development as part of the Planning Commission’s normal task of coordinating the preparation of development plans;

iii) analyse, in collaboration with all departments of the Planning Commission including the Central Bureau of Statistics, population and development information for purposes of better understanding of the relationship between population dynamics and development dynamics; and of preparing strategies to be used as guidelines in the preparation of macro and sectoral development plans;

iv) coordinate, and where possible undertake operations research aimed at consolidating the implementation of population and development programmes;
v) foster collaboration between population and development programmes through enhanced communication between sectors;

vi) coordinate, and where possible, undertake research on population and development aimed at expanding the horizon of integrating population in development planning;

vii) coordinate population and development information, education and communication (IEC) activities in Tanzania, including dissemination of population and development information through the establishment of regular publications, utilization of mass media, and the establishment of population and development information retrieval facilities within the Planning Commission;

viii) establish and manage a population-development data bank within the Planning Commission;

ix) coordinate training in population and development. This includes finding ways of instituting population studies in the institutions of higher learning within Tanzania in order to facilitate the recognition of demographers as an independent cadre; and

x) institutionalize the integration of population in sectoral and district plans through coordinating institutional building at those levels.
In order to function effectively the PPPD will consist of a staff of inter-disciplinary professionals in relevant social sciences.

2.2 INSTITUTIONAL BUILDING PROGRAMME

2.2.1 Programme Objective

The objectives of the institutional building programme are as follows:-

i) establish an institutional structure for the integration of population in development plans before end of 1994;

ii) create the Population Planning and Policy Department (PPPD) in the Planning Commission and establish its capacity to analyse population and development data and to forge mechanism to integrate population in development plans, by end of 1994;

iii) establish capacity in the PPPD, to mobilize and to disseminate population and development information, by end of 1994;

iv) establish in the PPPD co-ordination mechanism for the national IEC Programme; by end of 1994;

v) to establish capacity in sectoral and district planning departments to analyse population and development data and to integrate population in development plans by end of 1996;
vi) to establish capacity in sectoral and district planning departments to mobilize and to disseminate population and development information, by end of 1996.

2.2.2 Programme Strategy

As is the case with the whole national population programme successful implementation of the component programmes will hinge on enhanced commitment on the part of the Government to undertake reform in the socio-economic development planning system towards a system which will make population issues the basis of development planning. Other strategies will include:

i) provision of adequate office space for population and development activities;

ii) provision of adequate number of appropriate professional personnel to man the national population programme; and

iii) foster sectoral and district collaboration in the implementation of the national population policy.

The following projects will be initiated in order to implement the institutional building programme:

i) establishment of the institutional structure:

This involves the creation of the Tanzania Council for Population and Development, up-grading the Population Planning Unit, and the creation of population units in sectoral and district planning departments. It also involves the provision of adequate space, necessary professional staff and essential equipment. Responsible agency: The Planning Commission, sectoral ministries, and regional authority;

ii) training of PPU, sectoral and district professional staff:

This involves training which fosters the diversification of PPU staff into inter-disciplinary professionals, and training professionals to man sectoral and district planning offices. Responsible agencies are the Planning Commission; sectoral ministries and Local Governments;

iii) strengthening research capacity:

PPU’s capacity to undertake and coordinate population and development research relevant for planning and implementation purposes will be strengthened. This includes enhancing research management capacity and provision of adequate resources to undertake research. The responsible agency here is the Planning Commission, and sectoral ministries;

iv) strengthening sources of population and development information:
This involves the establishment of a population and development centre which will include the creation of a data bank, a small library and information retrieval facilities, and strengthening desk-top publishing capacity. It will also involve expanding the capacity of the Census Section of the Central Bureau of Statistics to process and publish the results of population censuses. Responsible agencies are the Planning Commission; and Bureau of Statistics;

v) strengthening of analysis of population and development issues:

This involves providing PPU, sectoral and district planning department staff with analytical skills and equipment - particularly computer facilities. Responsible agencies are the planning Commission; Sectoral Ministries; and local governments;

vi) planning models formulation:

This involves the following:-

- fostering co-operation among Planning Commission's departments and between the Planning Commission and institutions of higher learning in the task of formulating planning models which integrate population needs in socio-economic development planning, and
3.4 \textit{PROPOSED PROJECTS}

Some of the IEC institutional development activities are taken care of in the overall institution building programme above. Other projects proposed under this programme are as follows:-

i) establishment of IEC institutional structure, viz:
   - integrating Family Planning IEC programmes
   - creation of population development audio-visual production centre
   - reviewing the current out of school IEC programmes; and
   - creation of IEC sub-section of district PPUs.

Responsible institutions for these measures include the Planning Commission; Ministry of Health, and Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, Regional Administration and Local Government;

ii) establishment of serialized population education programmes in mass communication media to propagate the contents of the population policy. Responsible agency is the Planning Commission;

iii) seminars/workshops for policy makers and planners at national, regional and sectoral levels on the national population policy and methodologies of integrating population in development planning. Responsible agency is the Planning Commission; and decision makers of all policy goals and objectives and their implementation.

This role of IEC calls for a coordinated programme, implemented by a well established and integrated institutional structure constituted of components with well defined areas of responsibilities, aimed at reaching specific audiences in the population targeted to change their attitudes towards population and development issues.

3.1 PROGRAMME OBJECTIVE

The objectives of the IEC programme are as follows:-

i) establish an IEC integrated institutional structure capable of reaching all target groups in the population with relevant messages/education on population and development;

ii) mobilise support of the public, communities and families in the implementation of the national population policy;

iii) educate the public and communities on the interaction between population growth, natural resources utilization and development;

iv) remind the public, communities and families on the importance of family planning in their development, and mobilise their understanding of the critical role played by use of methods of contraception in achieving family planning goals;
v) introduce family life education in formal education system by 1997 in order to prepare the youth for responsible parenthood and citizenship;

vi) integrate family life and population education in general in the adult education programmes;

vii) integrate population education in all extension and community services; viii) provide population and development information to policy makers and planners for decision making and planning purposes; and

ix) sensitize policy makers and planners on the critical role of population in socio-economic development of Tanzania.

3.2 PROGRAMME STRATEGY

The IEC programme strategy will consist of the following main components:-

a) establishment of an efficient IEC institutional structure;

b) mobilizing the support and use of communication mass media;

c) strengthening the population and development information communication system;

d) revitalizing formal and adult education programmes;
e) fostering community participation in the population and development education programme;

f) development of required skilled personnel to man the IEC programme; and

g) provision of necessary working tools, including desk-top publishing facilities and creation of centre for audio-visual production.

3.3 INSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK

The institutional structure to be established will recognize the inter-sectoral nature of population and development IEC activities. There are overall IEC activities aimed at reaching policy makers and planners, mobilizing instruments of communication and sensitizing the masses on macro population and development issues, e.g. enabling people to understand the population policy and approach to its implementation. This component of IEC will be the mandate of a macro organ which in this case will be the Population Policy and Planning Department (PPPD) in the Planning Commission. In achieving the objectives of this component of IEC programme the PPPD will collaborate with institutions whose activities cut across sectors - e.g. the Institute of Adult Education, Adult Education Department in the Ministry of Education, Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, and Ministry of Community Development, Women Affairs and Children. The PPPD will also be responsible for information communication activities which will foster and enhance sectoral IEC activities including laying down guidelines for the development of these activities for purposes of their co-ordination.
There are sector specific IEC activities for example, IEC activities to promote family planning and AIDS control programmes, women in development programmes or population and environment programmes. These activities will be done by relevant sectors. Each sector will have its own organ to coordinate the various components of sector IEC.

At all levels, that is, at both macro and sectoral, care will be taken to ensure co-ordination of the production of materials carrying IEC messages to avoid overlapping and conflicting messages.

Sub-national development planning effectively starts at the district level where local governments are operational. Since Tanzania is an extensive country development problems including, those problems related to population differ in detail from one district to another, hence in addition to district participation in national IEC activities, there is need for them to have the capacity to undertake IEC activities specific to their particular situation, and therefore, to have the coordinating mechanism of those activities.

4.0 MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH/FAMILY PLANNING AND SAFE MOTHERHOOD INITIATIVE

The Maternal and Child Health/Family Planning and Safe Motherhood Initiative Programme will form a package which will be integrated within the existing Primary Health Care system. The aim of this programme is to promote the improvement of health and welfare of the mother and child through the prevention of illness and premature deaths. The programme is also intended to contribute to the broader goal of bringing down the current high rate of population growth through lowering fertility levels.

The objectives and targets of this programme are as follows:-

i) reduce infant and child mortality rates from the current levels of 115 and 192 per one thousand live births to below 50 and 100 by the year 2007;

ii) reduce maternal mortality from over 200 deaths per 100,000 births per year to below 100 deaths by the year 2007; and

iii) reduce the total fertility rate from the current level of 6.4 to below 4 by the year 2007.

4.2 PROGRAMME STRATEGY

The strategy to implement this programme will have the following components:-

- expanded programme on immunization (EPI);
- provision of family planning education and services;
- provision of family life education in schools; and
- implementation of nutrition programmes.

4.3 EXPANDED PROGRAMME ON IMMUNIZATION

The objective of this programme is to improve and sustain the health and well being of mothers and children within the framework of Primary Health Care development in Tanzania. It will continue to run as an integral part of the comprehensive maternal and child health (MCH) services in the country. This will involve taking the following measures to:-

i) raise and maintain the immunization coverage in the country to at least 90% by 1997;

ii) support the regions with immunization problems so that by the year 1997, they reach a coverage of about 90%;

iii) raise and maintain awareness and demand for immunization services in the community; and

iv) strengthen school health programme.
